Krueger-Scott Mansion Cultural Center

The twenty-five room Krueger Mansion is one of the few Victorian residential structures of major importance remaining in the City of Newark. It was built in 1888 by "Beer Baron" Gottfried Krueger and is reminiscent of a German castle. A veritable palace on high ground, overlooking downtown Newark, the mansion was subsequently occupied by the Newark Valley of the Scottish Rite, who built a seven hundred seat auditorium, and then by African-American entrepreneur Louise Scott, who is credited with having saved the Mansion from certain destruction in the 1950's.

The Mansion and its surrounding site is presently being restored to become a premier African-American facility for the study and interpretation of the visual and performing arts. The Mansion is an historic landmark and is on both the National and the New Jersey State Register of Historic Places.
